CHINESE MEMBERS OF ARMS PARLEY THREATEN SPLIT OVER TREATMENT

Conditions Reach Point Where Success of Entire Conference Endangered

MORE RESIGNATIONS WITHIN DELEGATION

Spark Only Needed to Cause General Conflagration is Indication

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Conditions within the Chinese delegation to the armament conference became so turbulent today as to constitute a menace to the success of the conference itself.

Following closely on the resignation of Dr. Philip K. O. Tian, secretary of the delegation, because of resentment at the treatment accorded Chinese problems, came today three more resignations among higher advisers in the delegation.

They were: General Huang Fu, chief military adviser; Chow Tsi Chi, former minister of finance and chief financial adviser, and Admiral Tsai Ting Kan, chief of the naval advisers and also assistant director of Chinese customs.

It was evident today that conditions within the Chinese delegation are turbulent and more resignations may follow. Hints were heard even in some quarters that the situation has reached a point where only a spark is needed to cause a general conflagration and blow up in the delegation.

NO ALLIANCE PLANNED

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Out of the mass of rumors and reports of alliances, agreements and understandings with which Washington has been filled for a week past, came today the positive declaration from an official source that the administration is contemplating no re-alignment of power here that can by any chance be termed an alliance or an entente.

It is not denied that negotiations have been made to the American delegation, that both Great Britain and Japan would welcome the scrapping of the Anglo-Japanese alliance and the substitution of a tri-partite agreement to take its place. Such suggestions have been made, but the talking has mostly been done by British and Japanese delegates. What the American delegation has in mind and what probably will be brought to completion, out of the present conference, is not an alliance or an entente, it was said, but a series of treaties or notes, confirming the decisions that are reached here, all of which will be submitted to the United States senate for approval or ratification. A number of suggestions now are before the American delegation, it was said, and it is probable the final actions of the conference will be cemented by one or more of the agencies proposed.

It has been suggested and the American delegation is now considering: 1.—A treaty governing the limitation of armaments to which the five big powers, America, Great Britain, France, Japan and Italy, will be signatories. 2.—A treaty concerning China based on the four principles which were written by Elihu Root and to which all the nine powers here, including China herself, would be signatories. 3.—A treaty between the United States and Japan concerning the island of Yap alone. 4.—A treaty between Japan and China concerning Shantung alone. 5.—A treaty or the simultaneous publication of declarations of principles governing the Pacific by the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

It was stated today the United States will not enter any pact designed as a substitute of the Anglo-Japanese alliance with its offensive and defensive commitments. As for the alliance itself, it is the confident belief of American officials that this pact will fall of its own weight after the conclusion of the Washington conference. It is disliked in America and it is disliked among the neighbors of both Britain and Japan and the belief prevails in official quarters that it will never be renewed.

This quartet of miners doesn't know whether they are singing in a major or a minor key, but if you think they haven't volume of tone, you ought to hear them. INTIMIDATION OF WITNESSES LAID TO LEGIONAIRES

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Officers of the American Legion and "interests favorable to the war department" are intimidating witnesses by whom Senator Watson, Democrat of Georgia, expects to prove the wholesale hangings of soldiers in France without trial, according to charges made today by Senator Watson.

The special senate committee hearing on Watson's charges is to begin Thursday and he is prepared with witnesses and affidavits to substantiate his charges, he announced.

"Some of my witnesses who are disabled soldiers have informed me they fear a loss of compensation if they testify and others tell me of having received veiled threats that they will lose their jobs or that their business will be made to suffer if they tell what they know before the committee," continued the Georgia senator.

"Nevertheless, I am going ahead and when I am through I think I will not only have proven every charge I have made but I will have shown that there was a deliberate falsification of the records of executions sent to the war department from France."

Officers of the chapter reported that the organizations had a prosperous year and that an increase of about 1800 had been reported in the membership, the total now being more than 12,500.

George Fleming Moore, of Washington, native Alabamian and one of the world's most distinguished Masons, reached the city during the day and will attend all sessions of the Masonic bodies.

CHECK UP SHOWS TWENTY FIVE ARE DEAD IN WRECK

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 6.—A check up today showed that 25 persons are known to have perished in the head-on crash of two Philadelphia and Reading railway trains near Bryn Athyn yesterday, as exclusively announced by the International News Service.

According to a high official of the railroad, more bodies may be buried in the debris, charred to ashes by the flames which consumed the wooden coaches when white topped coals from the wrecked locomotives, scattered death over a wide area.

Scenes of horror were enacted comparable to the recent St. Lazare tunnel disaster in Paris. Over a score of injured have been accounted for while pieces of bodies are still being found. It is probable that a joint funeral will be held over a number of the dead.

RUTH AND PALS ARE GIVEN PUNISHMENT

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—Babe Ruth, home run king of the New York Yankees; Bob Meusel, hard-hitting outfielder and Bill Piercey, recruiting pitcher, will not be permitted to play baseball again until May 20, 1922, Judge K. M. Landis, baseball commissioner, ruled today.

In addition the three players will forfeit all claims to their share of the world's series money of 1921. The punishment is meted out to them for participating in exhibition games after the world's series, in violation of a rule of the national commission. After May 20 the players may apply for reinstatement in organized baseball. Ruth's share of the world's series money was $3,362. Meusel's share was a like amount, while Piercey's share was $3,262.

FLYING CIRCUS TO BE HELD AT 1:30 WEDNESDAY AFT.

(International News Service)

The Glenn E. Messer Flying Circus will give their exhibition tomorrow afternoon at the Wilder Place under the auspices of the local American Legion Post. Weather conditions prevented these daredevils from giving their exhibition Sunday and it is hoped ideal weather will be had tomorrow.

Many thrilling stunts are on the program for tomorrow. Mr. Messer, famed movie actor and aerial daredevil will be seen in action. This is his first appearance in the South and a large crowd is expected to witness his death defying stunts. Messer has made several pictures for the Pathe Weekly and is under contract to make a picture for the Ruth Roland Production Co. Messer covers every point of his aeroplane in his wing-walking exhibition. He loops the loop standing upright on the top wing of his plane, sits on the top wing while the plane descends in a tail spin. He finishes the program by making a parachute leap from a height of 2,000 feet.

Capt. Worley will be on hand to thrill his home folks. Worley, famed as a daredevil, will do his best to entertain his friends tomorrow afternoon.

His daring and carelessness is a thing to marvel at. Lieut. Royce will change from one plane to another in mid-air, using nothing but his hands in performing this feat. He stands upright on his plane which is piloted by Mr. Taylor, and as the other plane approaches he grasps its lower wing and swings himself to safety. This feat has placed him with America's famous daredevils.

The performance commences tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. It is known that those purchasing tickets will be allowed to park their cars on the flying field where all stunts performed can be easily seen. The American Legion hopes all the local folks will turn out and help them make this day a success.

It was said that the government would reject any currency plan for financing the project.

Ford had suggested that the government issue the paper money, using the natural value of Muscle Shoals as security for the currency.

PRESIDENT VOICES SOLENN WARNING OF DANGER AHEAD IN REHABILITATION

American People Must be Prepared to Make Great Contributions

EXECUTIVE PERSONALLY SPEAKS TO CONGRESS

Large Part of Address Devoted to the Pressing Domestic Problems

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Stressing the great and far reaching contribution which the American people must be prepared to make toward the economic and financial rehabilitation of a world still staggering under the disordered conditions bequeathed by war, President Harding voiced a solemn warning today in the message he personally delivered to congress, that "no permanent readjustment can be effected without consideration of our unescapable relationship to world affairs in finance and trade."

For the first time in years since the grim shadows of the world war first began to gather over the American people, congress listened to a presidential message that was almost entirely devoted to the grave domestic issues confronting the American nation and international questions facing the American people.

The high spots of the message were: 1.—A world hope is centered in the Washington conference and a gratifying accomplishment is not improbable.

2.—Recommending a congressional appropriation to buy 10,000,000 bushels of corn and 1,000,000 bushels of wheat for the people of starving Russia.

3.—Recommended the passage of a permanent tariff law as speedily as possible and increased power for the federal tariff commission.

4.—Suggested the advisability of a constitutional amendment to prohibit the issuance of tax-free securities because capital has sought these investment channels to escape taxes, resulting in business depression.

5.—Requested congressional authority to arrange terms of settlement of the $11,000,000,000 owed America by foreign governments.

6.—Reported a serious crisis agriculturally and advised that it can best be remedied by better marketing and distribution along co-operative lines, such as has proved efficient in Russia.

7.—Declared further tax reductions are in contemplation but for the present the nation must be satisfied with a billion dollar reduction.

8.—Advised reclamation of 20,000,000 acres of western land.

9.—Disavowed any desire to enlarge the power of the President which he declared already are too large.

10.—Declared both capital and labor have inalienable rights to organize but declared both should be held amenable under the law for their actions.

11.—Suggested the setting up of judicial tribunals to settle disputes between employers and employees.

12.—Reported the Jones merchant marine act cannot be enforced at present and asked time to prepare a special message on shipping matters. President Harding finished speaking at 1:30 o'clock.

FORD AND EDISON LEAD THE WAY;
FORTUNE TO BE FORCED UPON US

"The Muscle Shoals project will be completed," was the final message of Henry Ford, when he left for his Detroit home Monday morning. In the same conversation the premier captain of industry, said that now that their eyes were open to the possibilities of the shoals, the people, regardless of what the federal government did with his offer, would see that Muscle Shoals were utilized. In saying the great project will be carried out, Mr. Ford did but speak what has been a foregone conclusion, ever since he made his famous offer many months ago. Perhaps of as great interest to the people of the Twin cities is another reported expression of Mr. Ford. He said: "Undoubtedly, we would establish industries in many places." He said that for a hundred miles along the Tennessee river, industries would spring up. Residents of the Twin cities cannot escape the conclusion that we are living within the zone to be thus highly favored. When the Muscle Shoals are harnessed to do their part in bringing fortune and prosperity, we will have no choice but to accept our share. Mr. Ford made another highly significant remark: "There should be perhaps a hundred more dams on the Tennessee alone." And Mr. Edison said, speaking of the water power development at the shoals. It is but a flea compared to what ought to be done to develop this country's water power." In another statement of yesterday Mr. Edison, leads the way to an opportunity for all to aid their section and their country. It is where he speaks of the shoals development in its relation to the soil of the Southern states. He says:

"At the centennial exposition in 1876, I remember seeing a section of Iowa soil five feet deep, all of which was suitable for growing crops. Neither Iowa nor any other state has such soil. We have been exporting our soil—converting it into meat and grain and shipping our products away without replenishing the soil's fertility. The great need of American land is fertilizers. This is particularly true of the South, the soil of which never contained much humus. Our cotton is not what it used to be because Southern land is becoming poorer every year. The market price of long staple cotton is about three times that of short cotton, yet the South every year raises more short cotton and less long.

A word to the wise is sufficient. In view of the needs of the soil of this district, and of the entire country, the big job of the citizens generally is to put their shoulders to the wheel, for more scientific knowledge and more scientific management in our greatest industry, namely farming. It would seem providential, that just at this time the Farm Bureau organization of the nation, is offering to lend its aid to the farmers of the South, and is offering to organize the farmers and their business associates in every county in the state including Morgan county. The outlook for this section, is the brightest that can ever come to us. If the possibilities of the future do not inspire us to greater effort in every direction and along all lines of endeavor, there must be something radically wrong with our ability to appreciate a great opportunity and to a rise to a great occasion.

OPPOSITION TO THE FORD OFFER SHOULD AROUSE ITS FRIENDS

In his final interview before going North, Henry Ford said that he had become assured of four things, first, that the South was thoroughly aroused as to the possibilities of Muscle shoals, and thoroughly in sympathy with his efforts to benefit this section, and the entire nation. Second, that he had fully established the claim of his engineers that the Wilson dam could be completed within the sum of $28,000,000, the amount originally named by Mr. Ford, but questioned by the federal government. Third, that the completion of the Muscle Shoals project meant such a revival of industry, especially in the South, as the world has never seen before.

And fourth, Mr. Ford says that it is now up to the government, to decide whether or not he shall be given the opportunity he craves. In this connection the great builder says that the enemies of the project are "Silent secret and menacing." He says the friends of the project cannot fight them in the open, because they will not come from under cover. He says it is unpracticable to fight them with fist power, and that they cannot be reached by argument, because they will not listen to reason. "But," concludes Mr. Ford, "we can fight them with our brains," and adds that brain battles are really the only kind that ought to be waged any way. Mr. Ford has enunciated a principle as to how to overcome hostile opposition, that is old, but one very seldom put into practice. Instead of men trying to out plan and out-think, those who oppose their efforts, they too often use abuse and ridicule. Such weapons never accomplish anything of a constructive nature. They only prove boom-er-angs, but come back and strike down those who use them. The folly of physical combats, which Mr. Ford had in mind when he spoke of "fist fights," are known to most people, yet still many people engage in such or have done so in the past. Mr. Ford realizes the uselessness of arguments, when dealing with enemy people, and the futility of trying to draw such out into the open. He does believe, however, that any kind of opposition can be over come with enough intelligent plans and schemes, such as will meet and block the schemes of the opposition. The recognized ability of many of the opponents of Mr. Ford getting the Muscle Shoals, and their power, which Ford himself says is great, should only prove as a mighty challenge to the friends of the South, of the entire nation and of all humanity, to give battle to them and those who sit in secret, and possibly in high places and with stolid determination sinister purpose such to defeat the most far reaching plan that has ever been offered by any one man for the betterment of his nation and the people of the entire world.

WILSON AND TUMULTY

The articles on Woodrow Wilson now being published by ex-Secretary Tumulty in the New York Times are very interesting. They are drawing attention to Woodrow Wilson and, although they contain almost as much about Tumulty as they do about Wilson, they throw a lot of light upon the ante-campaign when the chances of the New Jersey Governor really hung in the balance.

There was a queer incident during the campaign of Roger Sullivan for the United States Senate in Illinois. Mr. Sullivan had been the friend of Governor Wilson in Baltimore. In fact, it was the swinging of the Illinois vote to Wilson on Tuesday of that convention which really decided his nomination. Sullivan, more than any other individual, was believed to have brought about Wilson's nomination.

Accordingly, two years later, when Sullivan's candidacy in Illinois loomed up, Woodrow Wilson prepared a generous, wholehearted letter of endorsement. He knew how eagerly and earnestly Sullivan had fought for him at Baltimore and how in doing so he had won the enmity of the Eastern wing of the Democratic party. The old boss in the party, like Smith and Murphy, had often twitted Sullivan on his support of Wilson and threatened reprisals. Sullivan, however, stood like adamant against these influences and showed an allegiance to the New Jerseyman which earned the admiration and affection of every Wilsonite in the country.

President Wilson prepared the latter in which he stood by Sullivan as the nominee of the Democratic party. He always stood by the result of the primary, he said. Mr. Sullivan had been selected in a fair primary and, therefore, was entitled to the support of the party.

This letter he turned over to Tumulty, but it was never published. A man purporting to be the friend of Sullivan countermanded the order of its publication from Illinois, so the generous letter never saw the light.

It's something like the incident when President Wilson decided to offer George Harvey the position of Ambassador to France just after his election. This decision also was given to Tumulty, who, instead of communicating at once with Harvey, took around-about way to approach him through Senator O'Gorman of New York. Before Harvey could be approached he gave out a hostile interview about Wilson, and, of course, all idea of placating him was abandoned. The political advice which Secretary Tumulty gave Wilson was generally sound and true. Sometimes it was taken, sometimes it was not. But the book is certainly a graphic and interesting political history of Woodrow Wilson.—Savannah Press.

The real of thought is boundless. In an instant on its swift wings one may flit from childhood's happy scenes to the stern reality of mature years, when responsibilities crowd upon you. Time and space are no barriers to this faculty; it spans the seas, crosses vast expanses of land, and flits here and there at our will. Thought is a friendly faculty and seeks companionship, and touches other thought and impressions are conveyed, although the thinkers are widely separated. It paints pictures on the canvas of the mind, ushers in scenes of persons and places that have long since ceased to exist, and in this respect it is indestructible. The thought of home, and friends, and loved ones, has spurred many a tired traveler with renewed vigor to reach this heaven. A priceless faculty, well worth preserving and keeping pure.

Procrastination. The robber of time and opportunities; the despoiler of effort; the throttler of impulses; the destroyer of good intentions; the thing that has caused more remorse, more sorrow, more loss, more trouble, perhaps than any other one thing with which we have to do.

We know a thing ought to be done, but procrastination says, wait. We are impressed to do this and that, rendering this service, making this effort, relieving this strain, saying this thing, but procrastination, the thief that robs us at our command, says, plenty of time for that no use to be in a hurry. We obey the command, and Time takes toll, and the thing that we intended to do, or lavish our good intentions on has gone, and we sit in silence mediating that the chance is gone, while procrastination beckons for another battle ground confident of victory.

The camel walk dance is the latest creation according to the criterions of this fantastic art. Did you ever see a camel walk? Well then.

"I haven't time to do this and that." How often is this sentence uttered, when in fact time is all the capital most of us possess, and how unprofitable much of it is spent by all of us.

Me and mine are entitled to this and so, is the same principle that keeps all the nations from reaching an agreement right off the reel, and opening the door of peace and keeping it open.

Careless Arithmetic
"I am not much of a mathematician," said Carelessness, "but I can add to your troubles. I can subtract from your earnings; I can multiply your aches and pains; I can divide your attention, and discount your chances from safety."

him in his old age. But they all marry and support the fathers of their wives. The moral appears to be: Raise girls.

He was the only one of all the wedding guests who did not appear in a happy frame of mind. He only adorned the wall, and looked lugubrious.

"What's the matter?" cried out an exuberant young man. "Haven't you kissed the bride?"

"Not lately," he said with a gulp.

No one knows why wives have more relatives than husbands

It has always been rather surprising to us that some enterprising firm did not try to get some cure-all advertisements next to reading matter in the Book of Job, which is so full of boils

"I reckon, daughter, that young man's watch must be fast"

"What makes you think so, pa?"

"Why, when you were aching him out of the door last night I heard him say 'Just one,' and it wasn't much past 12 o'clock"

"John, why do you read those tips on the races so earnestly?"

"Why not? Don't you read the weather predictions?"

If more autoists drove slowly fewer folks would be driven slowly.

In these days of rouge, women folks kiss—and make up.

Many light-weight men are built on a large scale. It is likewise with some candy.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

The Loophole Pa Cosgrove Gave Bess Dean.

I GASPED at the revelation of utter callous selfishness which Bess Dean gave in her proposal to Dicky that we go back to the Cosgrove home, leaving Pa Cosgrove to accompany the physician back to the inn where the wounded trooper lay.

That she heard me I know by the impatient twitch the shoulder next me gave. But she was too intent upon Dicky's probable answer to her little speech to pay any further attention to me. And my interest in his answer rivaled hers, though I did not turn my head a quarter of an inch toward them.

"Very clever idea, that," he said, and there was apparent warm admiration in his voice. "Your idea being, I presume, that there is no need for us to get mixed up in this thing."

"Exactly," Bess Dean's voice was crisp, assured. "We are only boarders here, anyhow, and they ought not to expect us to mix up with their neighborly fights. There's Pa Cosgrove now, coming out with another man. He must be the doctor, for he has the regulation bag with him. Suppose you so and tell him."

"A Chest Protector?"

"No need for that," Dicky replied. "They're coming over here. By the way, Madge, aren't you cold? I thought Lillian gave you a chest protector."

"A chest protector?" Bess Dean exclaimed in laughing bewilderment. But with an intuition that seemed to me to be uncanny coming from careless Dicky, he had guessed that Lillian had provided me with her badge of diplomatic secret service, and I realized that he wished an assurance that it was safe and that I meant to use it if necessary.

"She did," I returned. "Since her own illness, Lillian's been terribly fussy over my health precautions." I meant an apologetic nod toward Lillian for my tardiness. "But I haven't needed it so far, though I'll put it on if it gets chillier."

"See that you do," Dicky returned with the most approved conjugal authority. "If he doesn't say anything else it was cut short by the appearance of Pa Cosgrove and the physician."

At the side of the car, Pa Cosgrove gave us the briefest of introductions and then hurried into a room. I hoped he would abash Bess Dean, although I had my doubts of it.

"There's no use of you folks getting mixed up in this mess," he said, "especially as they Smith may try to make trouble. So I'll just go down with the doc, and you folks go on home. The boys can come back on the running board of the doc's car, if they don't take us down to the Kingston jail."

Dicky to the Fore.

His voice was jovial, but there was an undercurrent of apprehension in it, and I knew that he was by no means easy in his mind concerning the probable action of the man Smith. "You're a dear, Pa Cosgrove," Bess Dean cried with enthusiasm. "What did I tell you, Dicky-bird?"

"So many things that I can't remember," he replied. "This is awfully dangerous, but this expedition is captained by a better man than I. The lady at the wheel is the boss. Long experience has taught me not to open my mouth until she has spoken."

I choked at the sign of Dicky's perpetually meek and silent. Bess Dean smiled quickly in her seat.

"Of course, Madge," she began. "Of course we're going back with you, Pa Cosgrove," I said, decidedly. "We're wasting time discussing anything else. Will you ride with us or the doctor?"

"With the doc, I guess; so if anything happens to his car I could help him out. It's been acting up a bit," he says.

"Suppose we run right behind you," I suggested. "Then if anything goes wrong with his car we can pick him up and lose no time."

"That's the ticket!" Pa Cosgrove exclaimed. "We'll be off in a jiffy."

The physician, a short, stocky man with the air of efficiency and readiness to meet an emergency which only the successful man possesses, already had gone to his car, and we heard the noise of its starting as Pa Cosgrove ran toward it. I turned my own ignition switch and swung in close behind Dr. Moore's car as it started at breakneck speed down the road.

"Well! I must say, Madge, this is a very queer proceeding," Bess Dean began querulously. "Why? Pa Cosgrove didn't care."

"Let me give you a piece of advice, sweet child," Dicky said lazily. "You might as well decide that famous rock you know—this rock shall fly as soon as I—as to budge my missus when she gets that Puritan conscience of hers 'set on an idea. Besides, did it ever strike you that if we heat it at this juncture, it would be distinct proof of Smith's alleged brain that we did have a hand in beating that poor lad? No, I'm afraid there's nothing for us to do but to face the music, which don't be frightened, baby girl. Keep close to daddy. He'll take care of you."

His voice, though mischievous, was apparently full of genuine concern and promised protection, and I would have given a good deal to know what his real thoughts were.

Japanese Marriage Laws.
The legal restrictions on the age at which a person can marry are different between men and women,
according to the civil code of Japan.
Men must be above 17 and women 15 years. There can be no marriage without the voluntary agreement of the man and woman when a marriage is to be contracted. If they have parents living they must obtain their consent, unless the man has completed his thirtieth year and the woman her twenty-fifth.

THE HOME KITCHEN

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON

The Authority on Home Cooking

Solving the Problem of Thanksgiving Leftovers.

AFTER his holiday or other festive dinner parties there are always a lot of leftovers, which at first glance do not seem to be very inviting, but on further thought we find that they have infinite possibilities.

For instance, there are a lot of different vegetables, some creamed and others just in butter dressings. If just warmed over they would be enjoyed, but pined they are a second treat.

Vegetable Pie.
Line a deep dish with good crust. Cut the vegetables in small pieces, mix them, then free them from their sauces. Make a rich brown sauce, only sufficient for the pie, cool slightly, then mix the vegetables in it, add a grated onion, a dozen chopped raisins and a quarter of a pinch of pepper. Put on the crust and bake until the crust is done.

Leftover Soup.
Leftover vegetable soup may be varied for a second service by skimming off the grease, straining out the vegetables, and reheating with a bit of fresh seasoning, then adding tiny quick soup dumplings, macaroni, barley, rice or tapioca. Or the soup may be turned into a cream soup by an equal amount of hot milk being added; a little soda having been put into the milk, and the whole soup thickened with butter and flour mixed to a cream. Most of the heavy soups may be warmed and thinned a little for second service.

Turkey Leftovers.
A platter of cold sliced turkey, or turkey heated in the gravy, is a second-day dinner, then the rack is left to strip.
This yields meat cut fine for turkey hash or chopped for turkey croquettes, a matter of choice. The rack, trimmings and even the stuffing may go into the soup pot with any leftover bones; a second service.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

The astral testimonies for this day present an unusually active and interesting state of affairs. All mercantile, industrial, professional and literary "ur-suits are particularly under fortunate planetary rule, with all sorts of encouragement for new projects and dealings with trusts, closed corporations and secret societies. Under the benignant reign of Jupiter, assisted by the favoring position of Mercury, there should be increase of business and financial gain.
A similar happy and flourishing condition should prevail in social and domestic affairs.

Those whose birthday it is are justified in looking for a year of growth and prosperity in business, with domestic affairs under happy and flourishing conditions. A child born on this day may be active, clever, accomplished, popular, and will make a name for himself.

HOME-MAKING HELPS*"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"*

By WANDA BARTON

Here Are Suggestions for Frolics for Young Folks.

FRIDAY and Saturday evenings are usually reserved for frolics for young folks, for there is no school next day. The parties vary from the smart social dance to jolly, informal affairs, where old-fashioned games are played, and, perhaps, a candy-pull is scheduled. Just the kind of party to be given depends upon the size of the home, the tastes of the young folks, and the matter of expense.

In one instance recently, an animal party yielded a lot of fun, was not difficult to arrange, and was inexpensive. The invitations read: "Come prepared to answer all questions about your favorite animal, and bring a last year's white elephant for the elephant's trunk." There was some speculation over the last request, but all the guests found white elephants they wanted to get rid of, generally among last year's Christmas gifts, and did them up in a dainty or deceptive manner and took them to the party. Upon arrival, each one dropped a contribution in a clothes-basket in the hall labeled "White Elephant Offerings."

When all were assembled, five minutes were devoted to each person's favorite "animal," and when all had been heard from, the favorites were voted upon and prizes given, after which all games were played founded on the peculiarities of the chosen animals. There was a hurdle race for the horse, the tail was pinned to the mule, tricks were performed in the dog's name, the toad's praise led to a lively game of leap-frog, the lamb led to a X-mas Goose memory stunt, the cat brought forth an intensely funny back-fence monologue. The games were original, and were carried out with spirit and snap.

Refreshments followed the games, and were served in a novel manner. Large wooden plates were covered with lace paper doilies, then the food was placed on them. There were three little sandwiches and a little paper dish of salad on one side of the plate, and on the other a slice of delicious cake and a little paper dish of dainty chilled pudding. A fork, spoon and paper napkin went with each plate. A paper cup of fruit punch was passed when all were seated. Forks and spoons were all that had to be washed. The only real expense was the chicken, but only the white meat was used for the salad. The dark meat and the bouillon were used in the family meals, so even that expense was reduced.

Tray service saved setting a table, and everything was made and left ready to serve in the morning. Cutting the cake for individual service precluded all waste.

There was a large white elephant's trunk rigged over the basket in the hall, and upon departure each guest put in his hand and drew forth a package. No one was allowed to open his package until he reached home. This lent an element of mystery, and in one or more instances the elephant, when opened, proved to be the one contributed.

For a modern candy-pull, a good candy-maker prepared the different kinds of candy, and when they were cooked and ready for pulling or cutting the young folks were called in and allowed to help with the finishing touches. This removed all possibility of failure and waste of materials, but the fun of pulling or pulling the product and turning the fingers—all part of the pull—was lacking. Modern youngsters run to fudge rather than taffy, so perhaps they did not miss the casualties.

A fall picnic given at a country club by the young sons and daughters of members was a novel affair, inasmuch as each girl brought a dainty basket containing a luncheon for two. The baskets were auctioned off at refreshment time, and the proceeds went to pay for the pianist who played for the dance.

A nutting party gives an excuse for an afternoon outdoors and a supper at one of the homes most convenient to the nutting grounds.

Shipping Tags.

Rather exasperating is the obviousness of many patented ideas that have brought fortunes to their originators. Take, for instance, the Dennison shipping tag. The trouble with such tags used to be that they would tear out at the hole. How easy a cardboard reinforcement. Just that was the whole of Dennison's invention, and it netted him a tidy fortune.

NEWS OF ATHENS

AND LIMESTONE COUNTY

The Masonic Minstrel which was put on at Athens College Monday night scored quite a hit, a capacity audience being present to enjoy the evening's entertainment. The program uncovered a number of stars in the local firmament and so great was the success that a request has been received from Rogersville to present the show in that place.

Mrs. J. C. McFarland was hostess to Circle No. 2 of the Missionary Society of the First Baptist church on Monday afternoon, November 28, from 2:30 to 4:30.

The ladies of the P. S. I. A. are arranging for a very attractive bazaar, beginning Wednesday, December 7, and lasts three days. Bazaar and Coffman, with true community spirit, have offered the use of their store, where the display will be on sale.

The P. S. I. A. met Friday, December 2, at the Fulton Mills school at 3:30. The Christmas program will be given by Mrs. Clay's pupils.

The first of a series of song services was given at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening under the able direction of Mrs. Leslie Martin. A program consisting of solos, duets, anthems and organ numbers were rendered before a large and appreciative audience. Lovers of music are unstinted in their praise of Mrs. Martin's voice, which is, without a doubt, the sweetest heard in Athens in many years.

It was an inspiration on last Saturday afternoon to have been one of Mrs. Hightower's guests, as she entertained the Snow Pryor Bible class. A cordial greeting and a friendly shake of the hand bespoke hearts attuned to the great law, "In honor preferring one another." We counted it a privilege to have been entertained by Mrs. Hightower, assisted by Mrs. Garth and Mrs. Crutcher. May they live long to gladden hearts with such lovely plates of appetizing salads.

The marriage of Mr. James Wood to Miss Frances Duncan took place at the "Cedars," home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Duncan, Wednesday, November 23.

Thanksgiving Day at "Woodside," home of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Witt, in the presence of near relatives of the bride and groom and a few favored friends, Dr. F. L. Bivings, of Atlanta, and Miss Florence Witt, of Belle Mina, were quietly united in marriage, Dr. B. Glasgow being the officiating minister.

The marriage of Miss Miriam Elizabeth to Mr. Robert Browning Chambers, of Athens, was celebrated at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Gertrude Lane at Auburn, on Thanksgiving Day at five o'clock in the afternoon.

A double wedding took place in the west part of the county last Thursday, Thanksgiving, when the two charming daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bracken were united in marriage to two brothers, the sons of Mr. and Mrs. William Peek. Mr. Charlie Peek won for his bride Miss Bertha Bracken and Mr. Robert Peek was wedded to Miss Ora Bracken.

The Reading Circle and the class in extension work met at the Courthouse Saturday. Full attendance and an interested set of teachers were kept busy until sometime after the noon hour with the lessons and assignments for the next meeting. These promise to be of great profit to the teachers joining these classes, as it brings the normal work right to their door at little expense and gives them credit just as if they were in school. The superintendent and those interested were very much pleased with the outlook for improvement in the county.

Mrs. W. S. Wilson was a delightful hostess Wednesday evening to the Tuesday Night Whist Club, which had deferred its weekly meeting until after the minstrel show.

Don't try to save money buying cheap or big-can Baking Powders. You can't do it. You'll throw out more in spoiled bakings than you save on price of the powder. And don't think that old style high priced powders are best because they cost most. They are not.

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

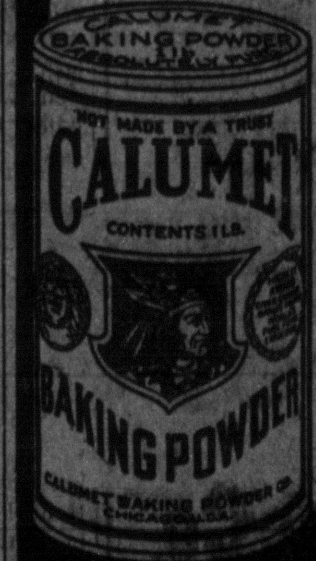

has proved in millions of bake-day tests that it is the best baking powder ever made—that's why it is the biggest selling baking powder in the world today. No other baking powder makes such temptingly good—and wholesome bakings. No baking powder of anywhere near the same quality is sold at such a low price.

You use less of Calumet—because it is the highest grade baking powder. One teaspoonful is equal to two teaspoonfuls of many other brands. And there is no "luck" about it when you use Calumet. No loss. It is absolutely sure. It is the most economical of all. Millions of housewives use it—and so do leading domestic science teachers and cooking experts.

You save when you buy it.
You save when you use it.

Calumet contains only such ingredients as have been approved officially by the U. S. Food Authorities.

LISTEN TO THE BELLS

A new system known as "audible ringing" has been installed in the Albany telephone exchange.

Through its use you are able to know that the operator is ringing the number you call. It relieves the operator of making the "I am ringing" report and gives you assurance that due effort is being made to attract the called party.

The audible ringing system is one of the most recent innovations in telephone operating. It not only proves of greatest convenience to the subscriber but saves time for the operator.

When you call a number and hear the purring sound in the receiver you will know that the bell of the called party is ringing. It is entirely different from the busy signal, and the two sounds are not easily confused.

The operators will no longer report that they are ringing. Listen for the sound made by the bells on the distant station and co-operate with us in our efforts to improve your service.

"It's a Disgrace!"

"Do something!" they both exclaimed in one voice.

"Indeed, I was doing something until Tilly Tumblebug came along and interrupted me!" exclaimed Mama Grasshopper. "I'll have you know that I'm fixing a nest for my eggs!"

"What! Burying your eggs in the ground, so your children will smother?" cried Tilly Tumblebug, almost losing her hold on the big ball of dirt. "You heartless wretch! Why don't you roll them up in a nice ball of dirt as I do? It's the only proper way to hatch eggs. Why, it's the only way!"

"Oh, dear me," laughed Granddaddy Longlegs. "Why each of you thought the other was idling away her time, and you've both been very busy little ladies. Now, as to the proper way to hatch eggs, let me say this: Each of your eggs is the best. Mama Grasshopper was given the tiny sword she carries on the tip-end of her body for the purpose of digging the nest for her eggs. You, Tilly Tumblebug, prefer to roll your eggs in a ball of dirt. No matter where you put them, so they're safe they'll hatch, for eggs are eggs, and that's all there is to it," and he stretched his long legs and went on his way laughing to himself.

"How stupid of me to think ill of you, Tilly Tumblebug!" said Mama Grasshopper. "I should have known that a bug as old as you wouldn't go back to playing in dirt!"

"And I say the same thing—I'm sorry," laughed Tilly Tumblebug, and, bidding Mama Grasshopper good luck, she pushed her ball, and let it roll down the other side of the hill, and Mama Grasshopper went on burying her eggs in the ground.

NEWS OF HARTSELLE

Quite a large crowd were at the depot this morning to see the new million dollar train that passed this place about 8 o'clock. Just enough could be seen of it to impress the fact that it was splendidly equipped, and every feature new throughout.

Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Puckett and daughter, Mrs. S. F. Orr, visited the former's daughter, Mrs. Arwin Draper, at Albany today. They are on a pleasure and shopping trip.

Miss Johnnie Pearl Jenkins is spending the week with friends at Austinville.

R. G. Sherrill, who for several years has been identified with the dry goods stores here, has accepted a position with Speake, Echols and Speake at their Decatur store and will begin his duties there on January 1st.

Mr. Currie, for quite a while in the employ of the Hartselle Machine and Foundry Co., doing office work, has accepted a position with the Malone Coal, Grain and Motor Co., of Albany, and went to work there Monday.

Evidences of the Christmas spirit can be seen in many of the local stores that have made purchases for the holiday trade. Some have decorated their show windows in an artistic way and the spirit of the times may have started on its way.

Preparations are being made by the different churches through proper committees who will have charge of the charity features, and the desire is to bring the spirit of the season to those who would otherwise be deprived of it.

Cotton shipments from this place by rail have amounted to over one thousand bales per month since the season began. Much of the cotton marketed here this season has been hauled to Decatur by wagons, since the highway was completed, as much as fourteen bales being drawn with two mules with all ease.

The country produce dealers of this place are authority for the statement that the chicken and egg business during the year will amount to as much as the cotton handled from this point. If this be a fact, great is the American hen and her products.

Most every home here now can boast of those fine table eatables that go with hoe killing time, spare-ribs, backbone and country made sausage, which in comparison with packing house products, makes the latter pale into insignificance. Practically all who had porkers seized the opportunity Monday to slaughter.
